Tinley Park Lions To Give Dance

The Tinley Park Lions Club is coming ahead in a fine manner in their effort to put across civic improvement propositions and in order to raise funds with which to carry out these plans they are sponsoring the first Lions Club Dance to be held at the Saenger hall in Tinley Park on Saturday night June 2nd.

The hall has been donated by Lorenz and Rein while the News-Bulletin office at Mokena is donating the posters, tickets and advertising.

Excellent music is being engaged and every effort is being made to make this a social event of the season. Everyone is invited to attend and help the good cause along.

The proceeds are to be used for street signs and house numbering. This is one of the big civic improvements the Lions Club is sponsoring in addition to a number of vital projects. Help boost the Lions Club as well as Tinley Park.

Mokena to Hold Memorial Service

Plans are under way for the annual observance of Memorial Day at Mokena. A very good program is being planned. An orchestra will furnish the music. The exercises will be held in the St. John Evangelical church parlors.

The Cemetery board of the St. John Cemetery Association has set aside a lot in the new part of the St. John Cemetery for the purpose of a township Memorial in honor of all the soldiers of Frankfort and this lot has been presented and accepted by the town board of Frankfort township. It is planned to raise a fund with which to purchase and have erected on this lot a suitable Memorial with a bronze plate bearing all the names of the soldiers of Frankfort township. This idea originated with Joe Kohl, assessor of Frankfort township and is worthy of much commendation. It had been hoped to dedicate the lot this Memorial Day, but a number of things have arisen making it impossible to do so. Dedication services will be held at a future date.

Tinley's Clean up Day Goes Over Big

The first official "Clean-up" in Tinley Park went over big last Monday and Tuesday. G. Dini hauled the rubbish away in his truck, so that Tinley Park is now a "spotless" town. It is evident that an official clean-up day will be proclaimed each year by the village board. The village board paid all hauling expenses.

This new improvement was sponsored by the Tinley Park Lions Club.

Orland P. T. A. Receives Charter

The Orland Park Parent Teachers Association held their charter night meeting Thursday night. There were representatives and reports from the parent teachers associations of Tinley Park, Mokena and Oak Lawn. Mrs. Swisher, president of the Tinley Park association gave the report of the work done there. Mr. Heiman, president of the Mokena Association told of their work and Mrs. Jaclyn, president of the Oak Lawn association spoke of the National convention.

Mrs. Hopkins of Oak Lawn who is assistant chairman of the P. T. A. presented the charter to the local organization. It was accepted for the organization by the president Mrs. Adelle Cooper who in turn presented it to Mr. Schmadeke who represented the Lions club that sponsored the organization. He hung it on the wall. The representation was a very impressive affair. Following this Mrs. Hopkins gave a short talk on the national convention.

Miss O'Connor, the county nurse presented a plan for a child welfare clinic for Orland Park and asked that the P. T. A. sponsor it. This was a very fine opportunity for the P. T. A. to do a very constructive piece of work for the pre-school age children. Nearly all progressive communities have such welfare clinics and many people in Orland Park have expressed a desire to have one. Some parents have taken their children over to the Worth Clinic because there was none here. The P. T. A. decided to sponsor this clinic which will be a great step forward in our community life.

Following the business meeting there was some special music. A piano solo was given by Miss Betty Habenicht and Miss Lorraine Hewson sang "Little Mother of Mine" and "He was a Prince". The meeting was adjourned and all joined in singing one verse of the Star Spangled Banner after which refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served. Every one felt that it was a very successful evening.

Play Goes Over Big

"Yimmie Yonson's Yob" a comedy drama which is being played at the Tinley Park Community Hall this week by the Tinley Park M. E. Dramatic Club is making a big hit. The show opened Thursday night with a capacity house and will close Saturday night of this week.

The players show real ability and the show is a most excellent one. The stage and lighting effects are superb. The hall has been prettily decorated and the decorations are causing much favorable and delightful comment.

Be sure and attend the closing show on Saturday night as it is a great show and you should not miss it by any means.

Mokena School to Give Class Play

These are busy days at the Mokena High School, especially for those people who are taking part in the high school play, "The End of the Lane", to be given Tuesday evening May 22, at 8 o'clock, at St. Mary's hall. "The End of the Lane" is as fine a play as was ever written for amateur production, and under the direction of Miss Heiland and Mr. Lively, the cast is rapidly developing into such shape that the success of the play is already assured. It is a play which has its principal setting "down east". Jim Denver, an orphan, decides to pretend he is the long lost son of a wealthy farmer of Meadowville N. Y. He is taken in by the family and loved for the son and brother he is supposed to be, but soon discovers he would much rather be a sweetheart to Coral, his supposed sister, than to be her brother. The situation, of course, is one which becomes very tense, and one in which the audience shares Jim's feelings. He had wanted a home and the love of "folks" all his life, and now that he found it, his joy of it is marred by the fear they will discover his deception, his regret for having acted a lie to people whom he has come to love as he would have loved his own parents had he ever known them, and by the knowledge that some day some other man will marry his "sister", whom he now loves with a greater love than that of a brother.

The comedy is furnished by the hired girl, Marthy Elizabeth Ann, who aspires to grand "opery", and by her admirer, the hired man, Bud Nix, who woos her with peanuts and gum drops.

Between the second and third acts there will be a reading by Raymond Heiman. This is the reading which will be given Friday May 25 at Manhattan, representing Mokena High school in the boys' section of the declamation contest there on that date. Due to the fact that Eloise Balaz who will represent the girls' section in the contest, will have a rather heavy part in the play her reading will probably not be given Tuesday night.

Tickets are now on sale by the pupils of the school. Get yours and come. You will certainly miss a good time if you don't.

Frankfort Slander Suit Dismissed

The $20,000 slander suit brought by Henry Baumgartner of Frankfort against Adam J. Heusner, also of Frankfort, was to have been tried before Circuit Judge Frank L. Hooper Monday afternoon, but the case was settled and dismissed without taking evidence. Mr. Heusner denied that he had made the remarks attributed to him on which Mr. Baumgartner based his suit. Mr. Heusner made what might be termed a legal apology and the suit was dropped.

Mr. Baumgartner was represented by Attorney Laggar and Mr. Heusner by Attorney D. R. Anderson.

Improve Properties With New Walks

The grade and lot lines were established by the village engineers, Kelker, Delow of Chicago. J. G. Oswald of Mokena is laying the walks with the exception of the one on the Semmler property which is being laid by Carl Miller of Tinley Park. This new improvement will pull the residents out of the mud.

Palos Votes $30,000 Bonds For New School

Reversing their decision of two months ago, the people of School District No. 118 last Saturday at a special election voted to issue bonds in the sum of $30,000 for a new school at Palos Park. The bond issue carried by the overwhelming majority of 95 for the issue and 9 against. The bonds will run for 20 years at 4 1-2 per cent.

The school to be built at Palos Park will be a four room brick structure which will be erected on the old school site. It was the question of the site which caused the election about two months ago to go against the bond issue, many of the residents of the district being in favor of another location than the present one at 119th street and 88th avenue. They were brought around to the other way of thinking however, and the result was the passage of the bond issue by a large number of votes.

The school board of District No. 118 hopes to have the plans for the school in shape so that work may be started early enough to have the building ready for occupancy at the beginning of the school year next fall. Members of the board are Ezra McCaughy, president; Peter Lucas, trustee and Edward Hyink, clerk.

A Stirring Plea

PRETTY LITTLE FLOWER HATS; CHIC ENSEMBLE OF GAY PRINT

BEHOLD the flower hat! It's here in myriad forms and colors and its vogue is outstanding. It is difficult to imagine anything more expressive of the new spirit of femininity which holds sway in fashion's realm, than the flowery ultra-chic eyebrow hats which animate the present-day style picture.

Just now interest centers about the close-fitting flower toques whose nose veils give them a decidedly "Frenchy" appearance. Tiny flat flowers are used for the making of these cunning hats. These may or may not form the entire hat, for it is as stylish for a hat to be half-in-half straw and flowers as for it to be all-flowered.

As in nature's flower garden, so in fashion's—a primrose toque here, a group. It is of transparent hair in old-rose shade. The leaves and buds carry out a clever colorful design.

While hats of the sort which are shown here are answering the immediate call there is every promise for a summer season of lovely feminine picturesque types featuring widened brims, charming old-fashioned straws, lacy transparent effects and a profusion of flowers.

Sleeveless the blouse, short the cunning jacket, two-flounce tiered the skirt. The aforesaid styling expressed in terms of gay print crepe with plain, as here pictured, bespeaks none other than a most likable, wearable, youthful and chic summer-time costume.

In adopting gay prints as media for coat and jacket ensembles, the mode violet chapeau there, others of big spreading poppy petals and one of the smartest flower types is that made of blue-as-blue-can-be corn-flowers.

The collection of representative flower hats shown here divides honors between the all-flower types and those of straw with flowers. The first hat with the off-the-face effect is one of the new linen straws. It is soft green with variegated green velvet is adding a unique and fascinating chapter to the story of spring and summer fashions. Novelty never fails to arouse enthusiasm in the realm of dress, and that is one of the reasons why coats and jackets of vivacious prints with matching skirts are making a tremendous "hit" this season.

For these fetching daytime ensembles, simple washable weaves, or costly silks, it matters not—the print's the thing! If one material may be said to be more in favor than another for these cunning colorful ensembles, crepe de chine printed in quaint patternings is "it." As to the styling of these youthful animated prints, it is of the simplest, given to softly feminine lines, as is that of the attractive model in the picture.

It would be difficult to conceive of a more suited-to-all-hours-of-the-daytime mode, than this one. The frock being sleeveless, it proclaims chic no less than it assures wearableness. "Without sleeves," a most important style message this, especially in regard to sports frocks for summer. With a coat to slip on at will, or off, when occasion calls there is untold comfort to be derived from a frock of this sort, not to mention outstanding smartness. Paris has cabled of the more feminine silhouette, flounced skirts, for instance, which accounts for the two-

Happy the man who carries God within him, an ideal of beauty and obeys it, an ideal of art, an ideal of science, an ideal of country, an ideal of the virtues of the Gospel. These are the living sources of great thoughts and great actions. Everything grows clear in the reflections from the Infinite.—Pascual.

KEEPING UP WITH PROGRESS

The reading and thinking housewife is an evolutionist; she believes in the constant improvement of our daily food. Improvement in methods, utensils, in time-saving and in service. The worthwhile cook is a modernist, she believes that there is no limit to which a good cook may go, for food possibilities are increasing all the time. A new salad combination thrills her as a new star does the astronomer. Some one has well said that "we already have stars enough, but we will never have too many new dishes."

If you have not yet acquired a taste for spinach in your family, perhaps the following will aid you in that endeavor:

Spinach Souffle.—Wash and clean thoroughly one-fourth of a peck of fresh spinach. Cook until tender in the water that clings to its leaves, leaving it uncovered as soon as boiling starts. Add a teaspoonful of salt when the cooking is finished. Chop fine two cupfuls of the cooked vegetable. Blend two tablespoonfuls of butter with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, add a cupful of cream and cook until smooth, add the spinach and the beaten yolks of three eggs, one-half teaspoonful of salt, paprika and pepper to taste. Add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and pour into a well-buttered baking dish. Bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

Are your onions always cooked or steamed in water and dressed with white sauce or cream? If so try:

Glazed Onions.—Cook a dozen small even sized onions in boiling water slightly salted for ten minutes. Drain them and add one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and a cupful of good chicken stock, or any good stock. Simmer uncovered until the onions are well done, the liquid absorbed, and onions well browned.

Young Dandelion Salad.—Find a bunch of tender blanched dandelions growing in some sheltered spot. Wash and shred fine with some tender green onions. Dress with a little salad oil and vinegar, or better, lemon juice, salt to taste, adding a dash of cayenne and you will have a most tasty salad.

Another good one is prepared as follows: Arrange lettuce on individual plates and on this place thinly sliced radishes and green onions. Dress with French dressing or any cooked dressing. A slice of cucumber or two will add flavor and attractiveness to this salad.

A Few Good Things.

A good cake is something that is never refused at any season, or any time of day. Here is an old one which still holds its charm for the chocolate lover. It has been popular with missionary societies and ladies' aids for many years.

Missionary Cake.—Cream together one-half cupful of butter and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Add one cupful of buttermilk alternately with two cupfuls of pastry flour, sifted with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda and one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves. Stir in one cupful of raisins chopped, two ounces of chocolate melted over hot water and one-half cupful of chopped nuts. Mix well, adding the yolks of two eggs and bake in floured layer cake pans for thirty minutes. Spread with the following: Boil to the soft ball stage two cupfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of water and one square of chocolate, one-eighth teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Pour half of the sirup over two well-beaten egg whites, cook the remainder a few minutes longer, then add, beating until firm.

Here is another old-fashioned cake, good any time and will keep for months in a cool, dry place:

Pork Cake.—Take one pound of finely chopped fat salt pork, one pint of strong coffee, one tablespoonful of soda dissolved in a little hot water, one cupful of molasses, two cupfuls of brown sugar, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, ginger, mace; one pound of chopped seeded raisins, the same of currants, one-fourth pound of shredded candied orange, lemon and grapefruit peels, and about nine cupfuls of flour. Pour the boiling coffee over the pork and dried fruit, let stand a few minutes, then add the other ingredients, beat well and bake two to three hours in two loaves. Chopped nuts may be added if desired.

A cool, tinkly drink is a delicious accompaniment to a sandwich or a hot day luncheon. With a few bottles of ginger ale and grape juice, the combination, a little of the grape juice to a glass of ginger ale, served with snappy ginger cookies, is a treat.

"How Come?"

Esther and Jimmy are the grandchildren of the president of a union of the W. C. T. U. One afternoon they were very busy "keeping house," the former being "mamma" and the latter "daddy." At the end of their play meal, Esther picked up two toothpicks and handed them to Jimmy, with the remark:

"Here is your cigarette and here is a match. I'll have mine later."

Their grandmother and mother still are puzzled to understand the episode.

CLOTHES IDEAS FROM ABROAD By Mae Martin

Last fall when I was in France, I admired the dress which the daughter of our hostess was wearing, and she confessed it was three years old, originally rose-beige, now dyed a rich, deep shade of red! The French are eternally surprising you with thrifty little tricks like that—tricks which it pays to imitate.

Most of us have dresses which, if allowed to remain their original color, are discarded or seldom worn. Redyed, they become favorites again.

Just get a package or two of true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, and try your hand at tinting or dyeing. You'll be amazed to see how easy it is to use Diamond Dyes. They never disappoint you. The "know-how" is in the dyes. They are real dyes like those used when the cloth was made. They never give things that redyed look, like make-shift, inferior dyes. The more than sixty colors you can get from them include everything that's fashionable.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's FREE. Write for it, NOW, to Mae Martin, Home Service Dept., Diamond Dyes Burlington, Vermont.

Vermont a Republic for Fourteen Years

Vermont is to be congratulated upon the sesquicentennial of her declaration of independence. It is almost forgotten that the Green Mountain state had its origin as an independent republic. One hundred and fifty years ago the difficulties of her citizens over conflicting land grants issued by New Hampshire and New York led to the formation of a state which refused allegiance either to Great Britain or to the newly formed union of revolting colonies. Fortunately, these independent farmers asserted in their declaration a willingness to ally themselves with "our brethren in the United States of America to do our full proportion in maintaining and supporting the just war." For fourteen years, however, Vermont went her own way, compelling the Continental congress to extend a quasi-recognition of her independence.—New York Post.

Glen T. Beatty, Pastor,
Sunday School 10:30 A. M.

There is increasing attendance at our morning service. There was a large group of people at the special Mother's Day service last Sunday. We invite all to share these services with us.

The pastor will preach on the subject: "The Wages of Goodness" next Sunday morning. The Bible says that the "Wages of Sin is Death". What are the "Wages of Goodness"?

The Ladies Aid opened their Sunshine Bags last Thursday and discovered thirteen dollars in pennies. The plan had been that each lady have a tiny yellow-golden bag into which a penny was placed for each day on which the sun shined since the first of the year. A great deal of pleasure has been afforded.

The Ladies Aid have re-elected all their officers for the last half of the present conference year. The present mode of organization calling for a president and four vice-presidents besides the secretary-treasurer was established last October to be tried until this May as an experiment.

So satisfied with the organization that no change was considered. This leaves the present officers until September and as follows: Mrs. Lizzie Moriarity, vice-president general; Mrs. Ella Cooper, vice-president devotionals; Mrs. Arthur Hall, vice-president social and service; Mrs. Rose Moriarity, vice-president ways and means; Mrs. Wm. Jones, secretary-treasurer. The Aid was entertained at the home of Mrs. John Balaz and report a splendid delightful afternoon.

Our Sunday school is maintaining a high average attendance for this period of the year. Our average attendance will run between 50 and 55 for this quarter.

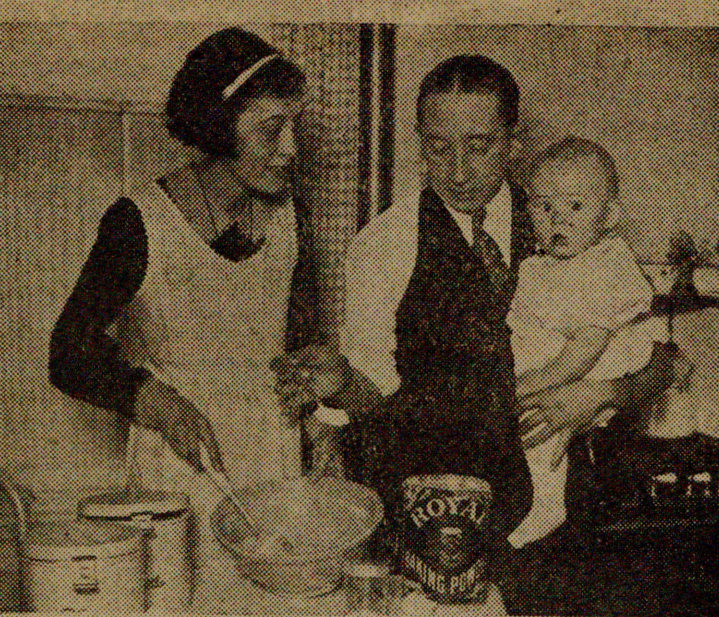

Fred Leonhardt who has been ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Philip Hacker, is able to be out again.

The DeSoto players of Joliet who have been seen and heard at Mokena a number of times put on a delightful show Friday night at the St. Mary hall, entitled "Straight Crooks".

A number of Mokena people attended the circus at Joliet Monday.

Andrew Wachter is making a real beauty spot of his lawn with a fine selection of shrubs, plants and flowers.

WORTH

The junior girls of Worth Community Church under the direction of Miss Rice gave a dramatization of the bible story of Christ and the People Sunday evening at the church. It was one of the first things of this kind that has been attempted and it proved very successful. The whole service was carried on by the girls. It was a wonderful demonstration of training when girls under 15 years could do such a thing. Miss Elva Wilson conducted the worship service assisted by Lea Rose and Margaret Bishop. Hannah English gave a reading which presented the story of the play. The characters in the play were Mary Bishop, Vivian and Margaret Russell, Elsie Lysen, Lea Rose and Margaret Bishop, Helen Foyle and Miss Lysen.

ORLAND-WORTH JUNIOR

The Orland Park and Worth junior scouts had a ball game last week at Worth. All of the boys that played were under 12 years old and it proved a very interesting game. The Orland boys won by a score of 25 to 9. The boys are planning another game at Orland soon.

The boys are planning to buy a tent and go camping as soon as school is out. They will only go for a night at first and plan a longer camp later. Mr. Sanders is planning to take them.

The Orland boys are now working on a bird house contest and many fancy bird houses are being made by the boys.

MOTHER'S DAY SERVICE
The mother's day service at the church proved successful. Mr. Povemire preached the sermon and conducted the service. A unique thing was carried out in giving each mother present a small potted plant. This was done by the Sunday school under the direction of Miss Margaret Lysen who is the superintendent and Miss Ruth the secretary. Plants were delivered to all the mothers of Worth after the services.

"For Those Who Sleep in Foreign Fields"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Romagne-Sous-Montfaucon, France. — The "wooden crosses, row on row" of World war days no longer mark the graves of 22,500 American soldiers who lost their lives in the World war and lie buried here. Marble slabs now mark each grave. General Pershing has signified his desire to place the last marble slab on a grave here when the work is completed. The last wooden cross to be replaced will be taken back to the United States.

THE above dispatch which appeared in the newspapers recently tells how America is planning to give Memorial day this year a special significance by finishing the work of erecting more enduring individual memorials to her sons "who sleep in foreign fields." For by May 30 the last historic white wooden cross which marks the resting place of an American soldier who lost his life in the great war, will be replaced by a Carrara marble cross on which will be engraved the name of the soldier, his regiment, his home state and his decorations, if any, received during the war.

Two years ago congress made an appropriation of $548,855 in the War department budget for this purpose, the estimate being based upon the slab type of marker. The American battle monuments commission, of which General Pershing is chairman, later decided upon the stone cross marker instead of the slab and this was authorized by congress. When it was found that the original appropriation would not be enough, since the crosses cost a little more than the slabs, the present congress appropriated an additional $186,000 to complete the work of erecting those markers over approximately 31,000 graves in Europe.

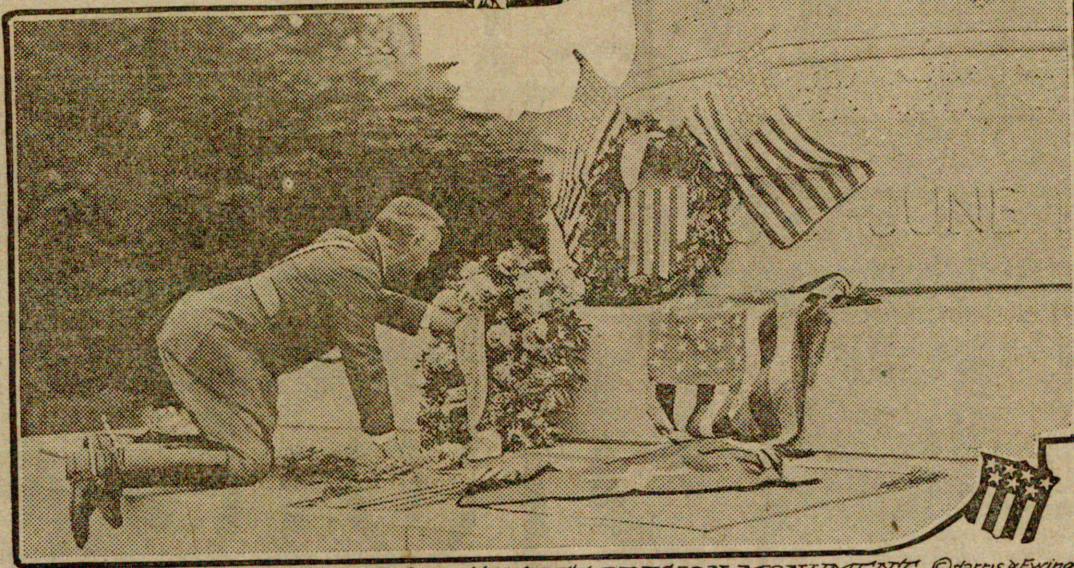

According to figures compiled by the quartermaster general of the army, 30,502 American soldiers are now buried in the eight American cemeteries in Europe. The largest cemetery is at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon in the Meuse-Argonne region where 14,045 of the new white crosses will stand "row on row." In the Oisne-Aisne cemetery there will be 5,934; St. Mihiel, 4,141; Aisne-Marne, 2,212; Somme, 1,816; Suresnes, France, 1,506; Flanders Field, Belgium, 305; Brookwood, England, 437. Originally there were about 3,100 soldiers who had not been accounted for and were listed as missing, but that number has been gradually cut down as new identifications have been made, so that eventually the total of 31,200 graves (the latest number given by the battlefields monuments commission) will be marked.

These individual markers, however, are not the only monuments which are to stand on European soil in memory of the Americans who redeemed it from the enemy at the cost of their lives. Sixteen memorials are to be erected under the direction of the battle monuments commission in the localities most conspicuously identified with the actions fought by American troops, and five additional monuments will recall the service of the American navy. Two years ago congress appropriated $3,000,000 for that purpose and this year's budget of the War department includes an additional $600,000 to carry the work forward. The survey of the sites for the monuments has been completed and the designs for the memorials, made by some of the outstanding architects of the country, have been accepted by the commission, so that Memorial day, 1928, finds the project for honoring America's World war dead well under way.

In selecting sites for the memorials the commission attempted to give an idea of the widespread use of American troops in various sectors from the North sea to the Swiss frontier and in deciding upon the type of memorial it decided to build three large monuments in the places where the greatest American military operations took place and to mark the sites of other engagements and historic points with more modest memorials. Accordingly the three great memorials will stand at Montfaucon in the Meuse-Argonne, at Montsec in the St. Mihiel area and at Chateau-Thierry in the Aisne-Marne region.

The Meuse-Argonne monument at Montfaucon, which will cost more than $400,000, will commemorate one of the greatest American operations of the war. The town of Montfaucon, which stood on one of the dominating hills of the region, was captured by American troops in the offensive of September 26, 1918. The town itself, now only a mass of ruins, is to be preserved in its present condition by the French government as a relic of the war. The American memorial will be an imposing column, 165 feet high and 24 feet in diameter, topped by a statue of Liberty.

The monument at Montsec, to be erected at a cost of $230,000, will be a magnificent temple, 80 feet square and 55 feet high. It will commemorate the reduction by American troops on September 12, 1918, of the St. Mihiel salient, which had projected into the allied lines for four years and had been considered impregnable up to that time.

In Flanders Fields

In Flanders fields the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; While in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Unheard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunsets glow,
Loved and were loved—but now, we lie
In Flanders fields!

Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you, from falling hands, we throw
The torch—Be yours to bear it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies blow
In Flanders fields.

—Lieut. Col. John D. McCrae, C. E. F.

This battle was one of the most brilliant actions by the Yanks during all their service in France. The Chateau-Thierry monument, also costing $230,000, will be somewhat similar to the Montsec temple, 600 feet high and with a colonnade 55 feet long. Although the Montfaucon monument will be largest of the three memorials, it is doubtful if it will have a greater appeal to the American people than will the one at Chateau-Thierry which will recall to their minds the deathless valor of their countrymen who there stemmed the German drive toward Paris in May, 1918, who blocked the last great German offensive on July 14, then helped in the drive south of Soissons on July 18, which compelled the German forces to retreat, and took part in fighting the enemy back to the Aisne river.

Monuments commemorating American service in other sectors will be erected at Audenarde and Ypres in Belgium; at Bony, Juvigny, the Vesle river, Soissons, Somme, the Meuse river, Sedan, and Cantigny in France; and in Rome. Two other monuments will be erected, one to be known as the Sector Occupation monument and the other the Monument to the Services of Supply. The Sector Occupation monument will list the sector service of all American divisions in France and will stand at Nancy, which was centrally located in the American sectors. The Services of Supply monument will be a tribute to the American soldiers who did not see front line service, but who contributed their share to the victory.

The service of the American navy in the World war will be commemorated in five monuments to be erected in widely separated localities. One will stand in England and will recall the activity of our fleet in the vicinity of the British Isles. Another at Brest, France, will commemorate the escort of troop transports and other service in the waters of continental Europe. Others will be erected at Corfu, at Ponta Delgada in the Azores and Gibraltar.

The erection of these beautiful and impressive monuments in the European cemeteries is something in which all Americans have a sympathetic interest, especially as Memorial day approaches each year. For the World war gave a new and poignant meaning to Memorial day for thousands of American families. Before 1918 the observance of Memorial day was for many a patriotic duty alone and their participation in it was more or less impersonal. True, they could not help feeling a thrill as they watched the little group of veterans—men who fought under the Stars and Stripes in '61, or perhaps in '98—as they marched to the cemeteries to pay their tribute of respect to their comrades who would march no more. But perhaps not one out of ten who helped strew flowers on the graves were saddened by the knowledge that this act of remembrance was all that they could perform for a father, a brother, a son or a friend.

But how different it has been since 1918! To how many thousands does Memorial day have a more personal significance because there have been added to the list of those we honor on May 30, the names of more than 46,000 World war dead whose bodies were returned to this country for burial and the names of more than 31,000 who still "sleep in foreign fields!"

The relatives and friends of the 46,000 can have the joy of paying their tribute in person at the graves of their soldier dead, but this high privilege is denied those who would honor the memory of some one of the 31,000. But they can find some happiness in knowing that their fathers and brothers and sons truly "sleep in beauty." "No graves anywhere and no cemeteries in the world are better cared for than these," declared Congressman Guy U. Hardy of Colorado after his return from an official tour of the war cemeteries abroad. "I have seen hundreds of cemeteries where millions of the soldiers of the World war are buried. The English cemeteries are fairly well kept up. The French and German cemeteries have a sadly neglected appearance. The American cemeteries are the best cared for of all."

"They are located in picturesque spots near the great battlefields in which most of the men buried lost their lives. No two of the cemeteries are alike, but all are uniformly beautiful, well-arranged and are given excellent care. They are all covered with blue grass and are as green as any Washington lawn. Trees and shrubbery have been planted, beauty spots laid out and developed. At the entrance gate of each is a caretaker's home and hostess house where relatives may find quarters. In the center is a tall flag pole from which an American flag flies always in the daytime."

"One thing that impressed me as I walked around reading the names on the crosses was the fact that there is no distinction given to rank or prominence. I found a brigadier general laid in an inconspicuous spot with a private on each of the four sides. The rows and rows of crosses stand out in the green field clean and prominent. From miles away over the rolling fields of France, you can pick out an American cemetery with its flag flying and its field of even rows of snowy-white crosses. The American cemeteries are beauty spots in Europe and will be hallowed ground to Americans for centuries to come."

It can be a comforting thought, too, to the friends and relatives of these war heroes, to know that the care which their government has given to the maintenance of their last resting place is supplemented by loving attentions from those who have best reason to remember gratefully the men who rest here—the French people. The American cemeteries, especially that at St. Mihiel, are constantly visited by the French who come to honor the memory of the men who redeemed their land from the invader.

For no matter what differences of opinion there may exist between America and France as nations, the French people hold in grateful remembrance the American boys who once lived among them and especially those who did not go back home after the war was over. How France feels toward America's war dead was summed up by Marshal Foch in an address before the American Legion in France last year when he said:

Let us meditate deeply before these numerous graves.

What lesson they convey in their impressive silence, these men so young who sleep here their last sleep! Had they for one single moment desired, wished and prepared for war with all the atrocities in its wake? Were they animated by desire for glory or hope of gain? Nothing like these sentiments inspired them. But on the day when they saw the justice, liberty and peace of the world menaced by violence and might, nothing could stop them and resolutely they took up their arms.

Abandoning their occupations, families, homes and country, they sailed to fight in a faraway land. They came, fought and fell for the ideal which is ours. They showed us our duty in order to remain faithful to their memory and to the task which they understood and with resolution equal to theirs to safeguard what they won.

Let us maintain the faith which animated them and the close union between the allies which made victory possible.

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:13-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—He taught them as one having authority.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answers Some Hard Questions.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaches Great Duties.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answers His Critics.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of the Kingdom.

I. The Parable of the Husbandmen (vv. 1-12).

Having put the scribes, chief priests and elders to confusion by a skillful counter question when they demanded to know His authority, Jesus by means of a story lays before them His claim of divine authority, and charges them with betrayal of trust and with plotting to murder the very Son of God. His teaching cut them to the quick, and they sought to lay hands upon Him, but desisted for fear of the people.

1. The vineyard (v. 1), represented Israel (See Ps. 80 and Isa. 5).

2. The husbandmen (v. 1) represented the rulers who were charged with responsibility for the spiritual interests of the people.

3. Messengers (vv. 2-5) represented the prophets whom God sent to Israel, even including John the Baptist.

4. The Son (vv. 6-8) represented Jesus Himself.

5. The judgment of the Lord of the vineyard (v. 9). This represented the time when the Jews shall be brought to account for their treatment of the servants of God and of Jesus Himself.

II. The Tribute Money (vv. 13-17). They already would have gladly taken Him by violence and killed Him, but they feared the people. In order to destroy Him they seek to discredit Him among the people (v. 13).

1. Their question (v. 14).

"Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" The Pharisees contended that since God was the real King of Israel, it was not obligatory, yea, it was even sinful to give tribute (taxes) to a heathen king. The Herodians were supporters of Herod; with flattery on their lips, they put this subtle question. For Him to answer "Yes" would have discredited Him with the people, and to have said "No" would have made Him liable to arrest as an enemy of the government.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 15-17).

He asks that a coin be brought and inquires whose image and superscription it bears, declaring that those who accept the coin of Caesar should pay taxes to Caesar. In this reply the Lord escapes their trap and enunciates a principle which applies to all time and conditions as to the Christian's responsibility to civil government.

III. The Resurrection of the Dead (vv. 18-27).

The Pharisees and Herodians being silenced, the Sadducees came with a question which involved not only immortality but the resurrection of the body. They denied the reality of the resurrection, and believed not in angel nor spirit (Acts 23:8).

1. The case proposed (vv. 19-23). The law of Moses made it not only legal but morally binding in the case of a man dying without children for his brother to take his wife (Deut. 22:5). They propose the case of a woman married successively to seven brothers. They ask whose wife she will be in the resurrection.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 24-26). By a quotation from the Mosaic law (Ex. 3:6) He proves the resurrection of the dead, and their continued existence after death as glorified beings. He shows that marriage is for this present life. He points out that their great error was due to two things.

(1) Ignorance of the Scriptures (v. 24). In the very Scriptures which they professed to believe was positive proof of the resurrection (Ex. 3:6).

(2) Ignorance of the power of God (v. 24). God is able to provide a life where there is no death, no births or marriages.

IV. The Great Commandment of the Law (vv. 28-34).

Christ's answer shows marvelous insight. He sums up man's whole duty in one word—love. The first and great commandment is supreme and undivided love of God. The second is like unto it in that love is its center, but love for our neighbor in the measure that we love ourselves. Having put His questioners to silence, Jesus now puts to them a question which involves the central doctrine of the Christian faith—the person of Christ (vv. 35-40). Is He human or divine, or both?

Kingston, Mo.—"I have not taken anything but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for 18 months and I cannot praise it enough. I weighed about 100 pounds and was not able to do any kind of work. My housework was done by my mother and my out-of-doors work was not done. I have taken four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and now I am well and strong and feel fine. I got my sister-in-law to take it after her last baby came and she is stronger now. I cannot praise it enough."—MRS. HATTIE V. EASTON, R. 1, Kingston, Missouri.

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent returns to New York after nearly four years' absence. Once known as the master criminal, Trent is going straight. The pursuer accuses Trent of jumping overboard from the Politania at Liverpool, but is disappointed when Trent shows no surprise. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. At New York Trent is startled to find somebody occupying his house. The stranger is Sutton Campbell, the brother of his best friend, who is serving ten years in prison. Trent is asked by Campbell Sutton to force Payson, Grant, a written confession, having crookedly obtained all of Captain Sutton's possessions and later married his wife. Trent, after long hesitation, consents. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Payson Grant. He learns from an old friend, Clarke, that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing, and also learns that Captain Sutton has no brother. Coming home one evening threatening to expose Campbell Sutton, Trent finds, to his great surprise, that Campbell is the escaped Captain Sutton.

Neither of them knew that Sutton's large mining interests in South America were in a parlous state from the beginning of the World War in 1914. Sutton carried his burdens alone. And when he knew he was to go overseas and had those premonitions of death which are as often wrong as right, he made over nearly all of his fortune to his wife. And to Payson Grant he gave larger control of the office. There was an old and trusted bookkeeper who was left to watch. This aged and deserving keeper of accounts was dismissed by Payson Grant while Sutton was still on the troop ship, eastward bound. His protests were ineffectual. The old watchdogs who had the traditions of an honorable firm in their blood followed the head bookkeeper.

It was fortunate for Grant that a loaded revolver was found in Sutton's pocket when he was dragged from belaboring the man who had wronged him. It was, to begin with, an infraction of the Sullivan act and as such punishable with seven years' imprisonment as a maximum. And every minute of the trial swelled Grant's ultimate triumph. It had been easy to buy false testimony from a former maid as to cruelty. And Sutton insulted the judge and turned the jurors against him. It seemed that fate, after smiling on Sutton's career and bringing him fortune and honor, was now bent on his utter destruction. Considering Sutton's long absence abroad, and the martyred years his wife had spent, the divorce and marriage to Payson Grant seemed to the sympathetic world neither hurried nor unjustified. And, since Payson Grant had plenty of money to indulge his tastes, and had not yet met a woman he liked more than Natica, happiness seemed in a fair way to be a settled state.

Then Frank Sutton escaped from Sing Sing and, notwithstanding the precautions Grant had surrounded himself with, he was uneasy.

"Nat," he said, coming up to the room where she was breakfasting in bed, "Frank has got out of Sing Sing!"

Her alarm was not so noticeable as his.

"They always capture them," she observed. That he was troubled did not escape her. She knew he was physically afraid of her ex-husband. But the modern society woman is not to be won by the hard-hitting male as are the women of other spheres. She thought fighting was a stupid, archaic practice and counseled Payson to get a permit to carry a revolver.

"You think he'll come here?" she demanded. A vulgar brawl which might be seized upon by the Saffron Press distressed her immeasurably. Why couldn't Frank stay in prison, she wondered. He had been tried and convicted. She felt she would always detest her former husband for the notoriety he had brought her. It was quite easy for her to forget that she was the cause. All emotions of a violent nature were wrinkle-producing, she believed.

"He's after me," Payson said gloomily. "And he may get me."

"Not if you're careful," she said. "Frank was always a most obvious person without subtleties or nuances of any kind. The sort of man who remains a grownup boy is fatiguing. He is just as likely to ring the front door bell and ask you to step into the hall and be killed."

Payson Grant frowned. This was callousness he did not suspect.

"D—n it, Nat," he expostulated, "you might be serious. I tell you Frank is a whole lot deeper than you ever suspected."

"Dear boy," Natica pleaded, "you are trifling with my digestion. I've a most important luncheon party and I want to feel at my best. Don't worry about it. I'm not."

"You take it altogether too lightly," he said, frowning. He started as he heard a knock on the door.

"It's probably Mademoiselle Dupin," Natica told him. "I take an hour's conversational French now."

A quietly dressed woman entered. He hardly glanced at her. It was the lady of distinguished French family who was to enable his wife to converse in polite and idiomatic French. She had set her mind on a chateau near Paris next year and the capture of the old noblesse.

Although Natica Grant allowed her husband to think she was not concerned about Sutton's escape, it, in truth, bothered her more than she admitted. When he had been sentenced, and public interest had centered upon other matters of the moment, she supposed the scandal would soon be forgotten. And now there was to be more of it. It might conceivably injure her in her campaign against the noblesse who were destined to be her neighbors. Mademoiselle Dupin was coaching her in the foibles of the people she desired to conquer.

Since two weeks had gone by without the apprehension of Frank Sutton and the police confessed themselves without clues of value, Mrs. Grant hoped he had escaped. He had spent some of his early years in South America at his father's mining property, and knew a little Spanish. Frank was one of those strong men who could readily do laboring work. Payson was different; she could not imagine her present husband in overalls.

Payson, for all his air of carelessness about the result, was in secret eaten by dire fears. He added two airdrales of blood to his establishment. He bought them because they were one-man dogs, he had heard, and turned them loose at night in the grounds. He was their first victim. The fact that he had paid for them was, perhaps, not sufficiently impressed on the canine intelligence, for they treed him as he crossed from the house to the garage to tell Regan, his head chauffeur, that a police officer had warned him of a piffling tramp in the neighborhood.

Natica was shown this new and nervous mood when he threatened to assault a small, defenseless man who had called to inquire if the new porch was satisfactory.

"You are drinking too many cocktails between meals," she said.

"It may be I am," he returned, "I feel shot to bits, and that's a fact, Nat. H—!" he exploded, speaking truth for the moment. "Frank got a rotten deal all round, and some one's got to suffer."

"A judge sentenced him. I didn't," she said coldly. She had convinced herself that Sutton merited punishment, and Payson's imputation seemed both annoying and false.

Grant had not been so anxious to leave his own country for the untold delights of the French chateau as Natica. But he found a new pleasure in the idea now. He could be more invisible in the Chateau St. Remy-les-Chevreuse than in Deal Beach. It had its consolations, being only an hour's motor trip from Paris. He told his wife he was ready to go whenever she pleased.

"We shall stop here for the summer," she said. "We've invited too many people to run away like that. Also, I've sworn my accent shall be perfect before I go."

Never during the long hours in which Frank Sutton spoke of the wrongs he had endured at the hands of Payson Grant did he use the threats which Campbell Sutton had swung over the head of Anthony Trent like a club. In one mood of despondency he advised Trent to give up an idea born of hate that the atmosphere of prison nurtured. But he had reckoned without his friend's loyalty.

The spectacle of Frank Sutton brought to the dust, his name dishonored, the woman he loved married to the man who had doubly betrayed him, was not of a nature to lessen Trent's determination to inflict punishment. And it was not to be an act solely of vengeance. He resolved to vindicate Sutton's name. He was not sure how this would affect the convict's status legally; but there would be money enough to retain the best of counsel, and in the end no doubt a pardon could be won.

Marvelous How Birds Wing Back to Home

Bird lovers have believed for centuries that migratory birds return to the same home, year after year. Modern science has proved this belief to be right. Birds are caught in traps that do not hurt them, marked with tiny leg bands of aluminum, each bearing a number, and released. Next year, the same birds are caught again in the same locality, often when occupying the same nest.

Evidently, a bird's memory for direction and location must be quite as marvelous as the older writers believed. The catbird winters as far south as Panama, yet catbirds marked in northern Ohio came back to the same neighborhood, year after year.

"I shall seek quarters in a more fashionable locality," he told Sutton. "While I want nothing better than this, it is not from Central Park, West, that those who storm society proceed."

At a house agent's whose clientele was a distinguished one Trent learned of several furnished apartments for subtenancy along the Avenue. He was looking at one in the rear of the house in the Fifties.

"I'd like one facing the Avenue," he remarked. "Is the one in front occupied?"

"That belongs to young Stratford Van Boden," the agent said. "I let it to him, but he's abroad now."

Trent knew a good bit about this youngest disappointment of one of America's most celebrated families. He had likeable qualities, but little moral stamina. And of course his enormous fortune had attracted to him the least worthy if most fascinating of the demi-monde.

"Would he sublet?"

The house agent was doubtful. He considered it unlikely because the monetary need did not exist.

"He is always hard up," Trent remarked. "I'll send a cable."

It was a costly cable and the answer prepaid. Stratford remembered Anthony Trent well and was pinched for ready money. The terms were generous ones and acceptable.

Within a week of meeting Frank Sutton, Trent was established in the most luxurious apartments he had ever seen; the home of one whose place in society was unquestioned.

It was Trent's first step. He had paid attention to his base as military tactics had instilled in him the advisability of doing. The advance was his next problem. He found in Van Boden's rooms the members' lists of all the exclusive clubs a Van Boden need belong to. They were clubs to which Trent could not hope to enter other than as a guest. He was not deceived as to this.

He glanced down the columns with interest. Presently he found the name he was searching for. It was in the most exclusive young man's club New York possesses.

Anthony Trent remembered very well his first meeting with Swithin Weld. He had gone into the smart Bachelors' club in Hamilton place, Park lane, with his friend, Arthur Grenvil. At dinner he was among a group of men of rank and fashion. And, since so many foreigners imagine all Americans of a type fit to be guests at such a club as the Bachelors' must be glad to meet one another, Swithin Weld was introduced to his fellow countryman by a marquis who thought they would fall into one another's arms.

Swithin Weld had never heard of Trent, and said so. He remarked it in a tone that was not conciliatory. He thought he knew every eligible American. Those he did not know were not eligible socially. Weld supposed that this Anthony Trent was one of those Americans, to be met with all over Europe, who have a genius for understanding alien people, are welcome visitors in great houses, and visit their own country but rarely.

One night, after a successful day at Sandown, Weld had gone to one of the most notorious supper clubs in London. There he had taken too much champagne for one of his temperate habits, and had been inveigled into a secluded cardroom where three experts had taken what he had won at the races, and left him heavily in debt. It was while the winners were waiting for the check which he hesitated to draw because he had not sufficient balance at the bank to meet it, that Trent came along. Trent knew the men with whom Weld was playing to be notoriously crooked. Apparently the gamblers would not accept I. O. U.'s. To obtain a check drawn when funds were not in the bank to meet it was a serious offense in London, and would enable them to make the Weld family pay through the nose for its return. The sum was two thousand pounds.

Trent strolled over and spoke amiably to his fellow countryman, ignoring the sharpers entirely.

Only forty-seven out of seventy-four counties designated as county tuberculosis areas have been certified as having more than three-fourths of all herds of cattle tested and pronounced free from the disease. Seven, the division of animal industry of the state department of agriculture has announced, are shown on the revised map as being accredited areas, or entirely free from bovine tuberculosis. The map will be on display in farm bureau headquarters, offices of county veterinarians, offices of state quarantine officials and other public places throughout the state to show the progress of the department's fight to free Illinois from tuberculosis in cattle. Revision of the map is now under way.

Copies of a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Academy of Science at Bloomington, advocating a calendar reform, have been mailed to all Illinois senators and representatives in Washington. D. C. The resolution, which was presented by Dr. A. R. Crook, curator of the state museum, reads as follows:

"Since men of science and men of business have long felt the need of an improved calendar and since several admirable proposals have been made by expert students in various European countries and in this country, the Illinois State Academy of Science again urges Illinois senators and congressmen at the National Capitol to unite with other countries in providing a calendar, which from astronomical, mathematical, and business points of view will correct many of the glaring inconveniences and inconsistencies in the so-called Gregorian calendar now in use."

On the heels of an opinion of the attorney general advising against indiscriminate shooting of dogs, the state department of agriculture has issued a warning to persons failing to comply with the statutes dealing with the control and prevention of rabies. Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom in a recent ruling declared that while the statutes should be enforced, authorities should use discretion when shooting dogs, or else be liable to civil action. The department of agriculture announced that unless more rigid enforcement of the rabies regulation in rabies areas is established, a blanket order will be issued to include the entire state.

After viewing the Abraham Lincoln statue in the Rosamond Grove cemetery, four miles west of Pana, A. Funk of Decatur, Ill., a personal friend of the martyred President, who has viewed more than 75 statues of Lincoln, said: "It is by far the most impressive of any Lincoln statue I have seen." This statue of Lincoln, the gift of Capt. John W. Kitchell, a Civil war veteran and friend of Lincoln, was dedicated October 29, 1903.

State Treasurer Garrett D. Kinney has announced that he will call in $3,000,000 from inactive accounts to meet the payment of principal and interest on state highway bonds due May 1. Mr. Kinney's statement in part follows: "In view of the fact that the first settlement of state taxes from county collectors, due April 15 was unusually small, I have been forced to call in $3,000,000 from inactive accounts to meet the payment of principal and interest on state highway bonds, due May 1."

A great highway, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is contemplated under a bill placed before congress by Representative Henry R. Rathbone of Illinois. Proposing creation of a commission to investigate the project and report to congress. Mr. Rathbone declared that the proposed transcontinental highway is the logical result of the country's growth. "This great highway would be a band across the continent, which would promote the unity of all sections of the country," Mr. Rathbone said. "It would be a bond of union. People would visit each other, come to know each other and then cooperate with each other."

The cold weather and late freezes killed about half of the cherries in Christian county, according to a report issued by C. E. Hay, Christian county farm adviser. A good crop is still expected, however. Last year there were about two thousand bushels of cherries in Christian county and this year it is expected that the yield will reach three thousand bushels.

The state division of highways has awarded the contract for the construction of the hard road from Wilsonville to Bunker Hill, Macoupin county, to Fogelman & Davidson, De Soto, Ill. The price was $134,134.93.

Other contracts awarded by the department are the following:

Route 80, section 125B, Knox county, bridge, to the Clinton Engineering company, Clinton, Iowa, $29,476.72.

Route 49, section 118-119, Champagne-Vermilion counties, pavement, to A. C. O'Connor and Sons, Ft. Wayne, Ind., $472,345.43.

Secretary of State Emmerson has issued a charter to the Citizens' Committee to Reduce Taxes, with headquarters at 140 North Dearborn street, Chicago. The object of the corporation is to bring about reform for the reduction of taxes in Chicago and the downstate. The plan outlined is to repeal the present law relative to full valuation of property, a reduction of tax rates, and for the prevention of passage of bond issues until there is a reduction in taxes.

A county highway fund raised by a 25-cent tax, can be used to purchase right of way for state hard roads. Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has informed States Attorney Walter S. Lamont of Paris. So long as the road has not been taken over by the state, the attorney general said, the county has authority to spend this money to lay out a state aid road, even though they know it is to be taken over by the state as a bond issue highway. In the Edgar county case, the state agreed to build a road on condition that the county provide the right of way.

"Uncle" Ephraim Adamson, one of the seven surviving members of Lincoln's life guard, died in Moweaqua a few days ago at the age of eighty-nine. Realizing the need of a select guard for President Lincoln, Governor Todd of Ohio received permission to choose one hundred men as the guard. Mr. Adamson, being one of these, heard the last speech ever delivered by Lincoln. Finding life rather monotonous, Adamson and the others proposed to the President that they be transferred to fighting lines. Lincoln had never deemed a guard necessary but quietly replied that they had better stay on duty to please Stanton, secretary of war and sponsor of the Union Guard.

Central Illinois farmers, whose wheat of winter seeding was killed by the cold weather, are skirmishing for seed to be sown next fall, due to the fact that a scarcity of seed wheat is reported. Some estimates place the percentage of winter wheat killed in this section as high as ninety. Much of the killed wheat is being plowed under by farmers and the land sown to corn. Corn planting is well under way in central Illinois.

Edward N. Hurley, war time chairman of the United States shipping board, sailed from New York May 13 as an ambassador of good will in the interest of the Chicago world's fair. Mr. Hurley, who now has tentative appointments with government officials of England, France, Ireland, Germany, Austria, Belgium and other European powers, will attempt to interest them in the fair, planned as a centennial celebration of the city in 1933.

Building in Chicago for the first four months of 1928 dropped nearly $30,000,000 under the figures for the first third of 1927. It was shown by data made public by C. P. Paschen, building commissioner. Permits for buildings costing $147,094,700 were granted in the period last year and $115,127,200 this year.

State Representative Sherman Eckley died a few days ago at his home in Peoria after a brief illness. His death was the second among candidates defeated in the Republican primary of April 10. Penn Miller, the other defeated candidate, died the evening before Mr. Eckley.

Plans for the construction of three fraternity houses entailing a total cost of $210,000 have been announced at the University of Illinois. The fraternities, all legal, are Chi Delta Phi, Gamma Eta Gamma and Phi Alpha Delta. The houses, which will be grouped in court style, will cost $50,000 each. Property for the houses cost $60,000.

Publication of Mrs. Honore Willis Morrow's "Mary Todd Lincoln" revives discussion concerning Mrs. Lincoln's influence on the life of her husband. There is little accurate information concerning the relations between Lincoln's home life and his public career. "Had there been no Mary Todd," says Mrs. Morrow, "there would have been no Lincoln, the Emancipator." This declaration is based on the common assumption that Lincoln's character was one which would have developed short of greatness, but for stimulation other than that furnished by his own ambition.

Judge Charles G. Briggles will hear the cases of oil companies in Illinois to recover money paid to the state treasurer under the invalid gasoline tax law on Saturday, May 26, in Sangamon County Circuit court. Only one case will be heard, without a jury, it is expected, and the rest will hinge on the decision in the first.

Nearly one hundred Illinois women attending the annual conference of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs at Urbana recently heard musical renditions by two young women whose ability has won them national musical awards. The young women were Miss Kathryn Witwer, Gary, Ind., winner of the national federation contest, appearing as a soprano, and Miss Pauline Manchester, Glencoe, Ill., who accompanied her at the piano. In the year 1927 Miss Manchester won the Society of American Musicians' contest.

Lasting Negatives

It is certain that a motion picture negative will last at least thirty years, for there is in existence now the original picture of the inauguration of President McKinley in 1897, and from that negative perfectly good copies can be made today. There are motion pictures of all our Presidents since that time, carefully stored. There are wonderful pictures of the part we played in the World War, and of other recent events in our history. Scientists and film experts hazard the opinion that a roll of negative film, kept in a proper temperature and a certain degree of humidity, or moisture, might be preserved for 200 or 300 years, or perhaps indefinitely. But only time will answer the question accurately.

Hurt in Auto Bump

Mrs. Geo. Mitchell is recovering from an injury she sustained a week ago while riding in an auto. The car struck a hole in the floor of a bridge and the jolt threw Mrs. Mitchell off the car seat causing her head to strike the top of the car. Three X-Ray pictures were taken to determine the extent of the injury. She was in a quite serious condition for a few days.

Seals Once Land Animals?

Seals are probably of land origin, but have become almost perfectly adapted to life in the water. They seek land or ice floes only for breeding and rearing of young.

Canadian Industries

Pulp and paper represent the largest of the manufacturing industries in Canada. Flour and grist milling comes second, and the production of lumber and forest products stands third.

Buy across the Counter

WHEN you buy across the counter in the stores of this town, you are using good business judgment. Why? There are many reasons, but one of the most important is this:

You can buy what you want at the price you wish to pay! You are not obliged to accept "something just as good," because you are in a position to compare values and make your own selections.

When you trade at home you are helping your friends to help you! And there is no finer thing in life than neighborly co-operation. It always pays—in happiness and satisfaction as well as dollars and cents.
